The bill to allow further time for the collection of taxes in certain counties was passed and the bill creating a bureau of insurance for the State was engrossed, after being amended with the view of perfecting its provisions.

The attendance of members was quite large, and a number of visitors were on the floor, including many ladies.

Miss Marghret Wilson, of Norfolk, a former stenographer at the Capitol, was among the visitors and was the recipient of much attention.

Mr. Boaz succeeded in having passed, under suspension of the rules, the bill providing for the payment of the contingent expenses of the Legislature, and at 12:10 o'clock the body adjourned.

M'GILL UNION IN THEIR NEW HOME

The members of the McGill Catholic Union assembled in their old rooms at Marshall and Ninth Streats at S o'clock last night and marched in a body to their new quarters, at the southeast corner of Sixth and Franklin Streets. This property was purchased from Major Otway S.

new quarters, at the southeast corner of Sixth and Franklin Streets. This property was purchased from Major Otway S. Allen last spring and possession was given on the 1st of October. Since that time the house committee have been hard at work preparing the new home for occupancy.

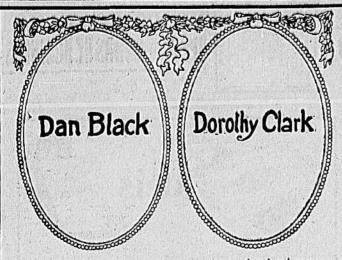

The fruits of their labor were fully shown last night, and it is safe to say that the McGill Union has one of the finest club-houses in the city. No expense has been spared to make these rooms beautiful and comfortable.

On the main floor are the handsome parlors, a library room, a lounging and smoking room, and a writing room.

In the front parlor is a handsome life size oil painting of Rt. Rev. Bishop McGill, after whom the Union is named. In the back parlor is a similar painting of Rt. Rev. A. Van de Vyver, the present bishop and honorary president of the society. This likeness of Bishop Van de Vyver is very striking, and a beautiful piece of painting.

On the ground floor are the nool and billiard rooms, gymnasium and baths, telephone cabinet, etc.

On the third floor are the card rooms, choss and checker room, board room and cloak room. The halls and stairs are elegantly carpeted and the whole house is richly and tastefully docorated. It affords in every particular the comforts and conveniences of an up-to-date club. The Union is now managed by a Board of Governors. The prasent officers are: President, A. J. Rooney, Vice-President, John J. Blake, and Thomas L. Cox, secretary and treasurer. These officers, with the following, constitute the Board of Governors: W. T. Ryan, James T. Dieney, James E. Phillips, Jr., W. J. Quigley, John R. Higgins Dr. William A. McGowan, James B. Kirk and M. A. Powers.

Dan Black was editor and proprietor of a local newspaper in Northern Michigan; a man of few words and these blunt and to the point. The following official calendar appeared as "standing matter" each week at the top of the first column of his editorial page:

What this all meant cannot be told here. Dorothy was a princess from the wilderness in the north, where lived her mother and younger brother, and where rested her father under the stately pines, one of which killed him in its fall. She had come down to the civilization line to assist as best she could in earning the few dollars necessary to the support of the little family. Few knew her except as the pretty waitress of Hemlock House.

These are the characters. It is an entirely new kind of story. You will find it complete in the Christmas number of THE BOOKLOVERS MAGAZINE, on sale (25c.) on all news stands to-day. This number in its new dress comes pretty near striking twelve. It has the finest collection of color pictures ever bound between the covers of a magazine; from oil paintings worth thousands of dollars. Excellent frontispiece color portrait of Sir Walter Scott. Loaded to the water's edge with good stuff put up in an attractive and pleasing way. Buy it and see for yourself. Place your order early.

THE BOOKLOVERS MAGAZINE has had a phenomenal growth. This number completes its first year. It has jumped right into the front rank in circulation, in quality and in advertising patronage. The Christmas number is a fair sample of what may be expected during 1904. Our ambition is to make the largest, the best and the most widely circulated high-priced magazine in the United States. WANT A DIRECT PRIMARY PLAN

Opposition Developing to the . Keczell-Barksdale

The proposed new State primary law, which is now pending in the Senate, and which is known as the Keezell-Barksdale measure, is the subject of a great deal of discussion in political circles, most of those who originally contended for the primary election principle within the Dem-

those who originally contended for the primary election principle within the Democratic party being opposed to its provisions.

The bill provides for delegated conventions for nearly all nominations, from Governor down, allowing local committees in their discretion to hold direct primaries instead for county, municipal and legislative nominations, in case of delegated conventions, the delegates are to be chosen in primaries and receive their instructions from the people of whatever party desires to make nominations.

These features are being criticised by the original primary advocates, but they seem to urge their most strenuous objections to the senatorial feature, which makes but slight innovation upon the old canous method of naming candidates for United States Senate.

The Barksdale-Keezell bill makes the county the unit, and under its provisions it is urged that a candidate might receive the popular endorsement at the polls and yet be defeated in the caucus which would follow.

No provision is made for instructing holdover senators, and but few of them feel bound by instructions given House candidates in their districts, Again, the voice of the people in all the districts which may send anti-Democrats here would be lost in the caucus, though it would count in a direct vote for senator, Mr. Keezell is inclined to the belief that the bill is not perfect and contains some objectionable features.

A GENERAL OBSERVANCE

The Spirit of Thanksgiving in the Air of Richmond on Yesterday.

RESEMBLANCE TO CHRISTMAS

Business Suspended to a Great Extent and All Bent on Enjoying Themselves.

Not in all the years that have passed has Richmond witnessed so generous an outpouring, so responsive a spirit to the sentiment of the occasion, so lightsome and glad a crowd as on yestreday went to make up the people's thanksgiving.

Of all the good and ancient festivals that commend themselves to the population at large none is more dear to the heart than the home-like and popular Thanksgiving, an institution peculiar to the soil. In Richmond nothing short of the Yuletide liself can hope to equal it, and of all Thanksgivings yesterday's was the most positive and conclusive evidence of this fact. From early morn until nearly midnight the people of the city and the people of many other cities assembled here surrendered themselves, with a snap and a vim never before exceeded, to the spirit of the day. Broad Street was a seething, surging mass, a likely field for the many voices, the hoots and howis of men and women, young and old, as they yelled the foot-ball jargon that was the keynote of this feature of the observance, the ear-piereing shrieks of hoarse tin horns. Here was a center of the "celebration that expressed itself in observance, the ear-pierolns shricks of the reciebration that expressed itself in many other ways besides—in the services of praise and song among the congregations, in the gathering around the dinner table in the home, in the reunion of the merry party at night, in the outing and the picnic long awaited and planned. All was happiness and gathers and a light-hearted people laughed the cold of the day away. Business was suspended, and the worries and cares of the daily light-hearted people laughed the cold of the day away. Business was suspended, and the worries and cares of the daily toil were cast aside. Poor, indeed, was the man who had not this opportunity, who did not enjoy the Thanksgiving of 1903 to his fill. Church Services.

Church Services.

It fittingly happened that the day began with the gathering of the congregations in the churches, where were held services of praise and thanks unto God for the blessings of a past year. Not one denomination, but all, with a spirit that united them for the nonce, thus gave expression to the gratitude and love for the Bupreme Ruler of them all. During the morning many such services were held and the congregations were everywhere large and responsive to the spirit of the occasion. Joyous music was sung by the choirs, and sermons, touching different phases of the same general subject—thanks to the Almighty-were preached from many pulpits.

Among the Catholics and the Episcopalians each church held some service, A special sermon was preached at the Cathedral, and at the Sacred Heart Church high mass was celebrated at 0 o'clock. The Rev. Father O'Reilly was the celebrant, and the music was sung by the children of the parish school. The sermon was on'ff therical appropriate to the day. At 8 o'clock flat night an organ recital was given at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church by Professor William M. Large congregations were in attendance

Largs congregations were in attendance upon the Baptlat services. One was held at the Second Church at 11 A. M., at which five congregations united—First, Second, Grace Street, Orove Avenua and Caivary. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Weston Bruner, D. D., paster of Caivary. One or two of the churches on Church Hill held services of their own, and there was a service in the morning at Pine Street. The Rev. C. C. Coleman, of Washington, preached a fine sermon
to a large congregation.

A union service of the Methodists was held at Centenary in the morning. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. T.
Whitley, D. D., presiding elder of the Rappahannock District. The offering was for the Home for Aged Women.

The annual supper of the Parsonage and the Helping Hand Society of the Laurel Street Church was held fast night in the lecture room of the church. A humorous address was delivered by Dr.
John Hannon, of Trinity.

The Presbyterlans united in a service at the First Church. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Eggleston, of the Third Church. A special service for boys was held at 9:30 o'clock in the morning in the Covenanter building of the Second Church. About four Covenanter societies were in attendance. The address was delivered by the Rev. Dr.
John I. Armstrong, of Union Theological Seminary.

Broad Street was early astir, and as the day grew, the crowd grew with it. By noon the ton central squares of the sidewalks were a solid mass of moving people. Men, women and children were there, all good natured and jolly, and there was no lack of the lusty American fuss. Tin horas were in pienty and all other racket-making devices were pressed into service. The gleam of the orange and the blue or the softer sheen of the white and the blue could be seen at every step-streaming from the hats, or the lapels, of pretty girls as laughing merrily, they wont by in bevies; from the canes of the Jaunty cavallers: from the reins of the trotting horses; from the show windows; from everywhere, University students gathered in bunches here and there, and beating time with hands and feet, sent forth the universal, but far-reaching, song that beginneth thus: "Tah, rah," and end the likewise.

For awhile the street was partially cleared, while the people gathered around the gridiron and watched the mighty struggle, in which the flaunting Virginia colors were trailed in the dust. Then, the press began again, and the scenes of the morning were repeated with some additions in the way of extra yells from the victorious Tarheels, and fower from the homefolks. Then, finally, nightful with an access of cold, drove the crowd indoors, where the celebration was continued until midnight and later.

Outings and Parties.

On its social side Thanksgiving was agiln an occasion of moment. Any number of parties, large and small, were arranged, and the merriment began early and continued late. Dinners, suppers, teas, and everything else of the sort were on the programme.

and continued to the sort were on the programme.

The Thanksgiving dinner was a function that was missed by no one. Around the slain gobbler he family gathered, and in its quiet where the family gathered and in its quiet where the same that did and the that did not the hardthood of Ameltad to the hardthood of Ameltad to the family gathered and in the fobbler, lay, the toothsome and inviting center of the spread.

There were any number of outings and unting parties. Many little trips were planned carried out, and Richmond people in unknown numbers sought the quiet of some countyside for their celebration. The clubs of the city kept oren too. The clubs of the city kept oren to the program of the majority of cases the object was some benevolent one—a worthy thought for a Thanksgiving.
